The Qantas Indigenous Cadetship Program for University Students

Are you looking for an exciting opportunity to utilise the experience gained from your university degree and to learn and develop in a fascinating industry with an iconic Australian business?

Qantas is seeking Indigenous university undergraduates in diverse fields of study including Accounting, Finance, Law, Engineering, Construction, Project Management and Human Resources to apply for the Qantas Indigenous Cadetship Program offered by Qantas in its Sydney Head Office at Mascot.

The Qantas Indigenous Cadetship Program commences at different stages throughout the academic year and will provide Indigenous university students with financial assistance to undertake their university studies and practical work experience for 12 weeks throughout the year for the duration of their studies. The work placement can be undertaken either in blocks or periodically throughout the year. Students are paid a living allowance while studying in addition to a salary during their work placement.

At Qantas, your new cadetship placement position will see you gaining hands-on operational experience across the Qantas business and gain exposure to areas such as recruitment, remuneration and benefits, health safety and environment, learning and development, reporting and project services, workers compensation, award interpretation services, ground transport, payroll payment services, property and accounts.

On successful completion of the cadetship, you will have the opportunity to apply for permanent employment with Qantas either through mainstream recruitment processes or the Qantas Graduate Recruitment Program. If successful, you will gain access to a diverse and attractive range of benefits and a variety of career options arising from the specialisation of our various businesses.
